All About My Mother do you have a positive story about your mother? A mother's bond with her children is the simplest and greatest form of love. From nursing and nurturing, a mother spends a great deal of time caring and providing for her children. I felt it necessary to create this because of single moms who are in need, to acknowledge their dedication and love to providing as best they can for their children. Although my parents are still married, we didn't have a lot of money while I was growing up. I can remember many of the sacrifices she made for us kids and without it, who knows how things would be today. With that being said, I've decided to create a section called "all about my mother".

My mom was a strong, persistent, and caring woman. Of course while growing up, I didn't see things as clearly as I do once I have my own children. I just thought she was being mean and didn't want me to have any fun. Sound familiar? When I needed help, she was there.

When I was in a jam, she was there.

When my life fell apart, she was there.

When I had my two sons, she was there. Now that my life is going well... she is there! Now to turn things around, there are some mothers who are struggling. Whether it be financially, emotionally, or trying to get out of a bad situation. These moms need help! They would like their children to someday - write a positive story called "all about my mother". But having to work multiple jobs, keep their children warm, keep them safe, and just fight to keep them healthy is very difficult without the necessities. Clothes cost money, housing costs money, food costs money... children cost money! I've come across many mothers who just want a simple gift for their child. They don't want money or pity, they just want to see the smile on their child's face when they play with the toy. They don't want their child to feel resentful or bitter, just because they can't afford things. So if you were to write a story with the title "all about my mother" would you feel warm inside with fond memories? Please help a mom in need to keep that special bond with their children. Warmest Wishes,
Russ
